

How to stop dandruff and loss of hair with Resinol

Here is a simple, inexpensive treatment that will generally stop dandruff and scalp itching, and keep the hair thick, live and lustrous:

At night, spread the hair apart and rub a little Resinol Ointment into the scalp gently, with the tip of the finger. Repeat this until the whole scalp has been treated. Next morning, shampoo thoroughly with Resinol Soap and hot water. Work the creamy Resinol lather well into the scalp. Rinse with gradually cooler water, the last water being cold. All druggists sell Resinol Soap and Ointment.

Daily Meetings of Granite Cutters Being Held to Discuss Situation.

Daily meetings of the local branch, G. C. I. A., are held, but no progress has been made toward a settlement of the matters at issue between its members and the Woodbury Granite company. The membership of the branch has not materially lessened since the first of the month. The exact membership yesterday was 106. The feeling is very persistent that an early adjustment will be made when General Manager Clifford returns from an important business trip to the Middle West and that the situation will not materially change until then. Just when he will return is not known.

A son was born yesterday at the Bascom house to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lally. This is the first child born at the hotel within the knowledge of its owner, Harry Emery.

Beattie, on behalf of Mrs. Anderson's friends, presented her a beautiful dinner set and a silver tea service, for which she responded very feelingly. Refreshments were then served and all returned to their homes at a late hour, wishing Mrs. Anderson many happy returns of the day.

The Immigrant Problem in the Colleges.

Social work among immigrants is assuming special importance as a college subject according to the bureau of education of the department of the interior. Fourteen institutions are now offering special courses which treat the subject of immigration though few of these have as yet given much attention to the practical problem of what to do with the immigrant as a man and a citizen. Sixty-nine institutions treat the subject incidentally in connection with courses in economics, history and society.

In order to help in the present urgent demand for Americanization service for immigrants the bureau of education has prepared a syllabus for the "Professional Course for Service Among Immigrants." Some of the topics treated are as follows: The incoming tide and its distribution; legislation and restriction; employment; standards of living; education; and ideals and methods in Americanization work.

In view of the interest shown by colleges in the subject of immigrant education the commissioner of education has offered to give assistance and advice with respect to courses of study and methods of instruction. Colleges and universities planning to introduce courses in training for leadership in Americanization service. The division of immigrant education in the bureau has centered its attention upon the problems connected with the education of immigrants and the inculcation of American civic ideals. Dr. F. E. Farrington of this division declares:

"American colleges and universities are more and more awakening to the necessity of teaching modern life on its dynamic side. In inspiring and initiating social progress and of training leaders in the work of civic uplift. Here is a field which opens up almost limitless possibilities in the way of social service. One needs however a peculiar sympathy for and a specific knowledge of the foreigner appreciation of his limitations and his possibilities as well as a realization of what he can contribute to our economic and spiritual progress when properly assimilated and what grave dangers he can also bring if we fail to impart trained and competent laborers are few. Letters have been received at the bureau of education lamenting the fact that evening-school classes for foreigners have been given up on account of the lack of trained principals, and teachers to handle this problem.

"Upon our colleges and universities, therefore, devolves the responsibility of preparing these workers, of giving them breadth of vision, and catholicity of purpose, in short of training them for their tasks."

For the benefit to be derived from military training property given is not one-sided. Something to impress Americans with the necessity for discipline, and particularly self-discipline, is badly needed. Military drill in the schools should help in this direction just as much as it should benefit the scholars generally by the substitution of reading and regular exercises for more violent and sporadic forms, such as marathon running and football.—New York Evening Sun.

New Hampshire's Vet-Drift.

Returns from the primary balloting in New Hampshire are not without significance here. Mr. Chellis made a spirited fight in behalf of the colonel, utilizing the party at this stage of the game for his nomination. He has not desired this, either in New Hampshire or here, and his friends in that state evidently decided to respect his wishes, just as, we believe, they will do here on April 25.—Boston Herald.

"SAFETY FIRST" EXHIBIT

To Be Conducted About the Country By Special Train.

The safety first exposition, which was held in Washington recently and which depicted what the federal government is doing in the saving of life and property, may soon be brought to the doorsteps of every citizen in the United States.

The exposition was of such far-reaching educational value and created so much public interest that Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane conceived the idea that the rest of the country ought, if possible, to be given the opportunity of seeing it. He accordingly wrote a letter to Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, requesting the free use of a complete train for that purpose. President Willard responded immediately and offered to furnish an all-steel train of any necessary number of cars to transport the exhibits. The railroad also agreed to haul this train free of charge over the entire length of its line, stopping a sufficient length of time in each city or town to enable the people to inspect thoroughly the various exhibits.

It has been tentatively agreed that this train will be in Washington by May 1, and that it will be equipped as rapidly as possible and sent on its way. An itinerary will be arranged without delay. It is the plan of Secretary Lane that upon the completion of this itinerary the other prominent railroads of the country will be asked to extend similar favors over their lines and in this way he hopes that everyone in the country sufficiently interested will be able to see the exhibits.

The exposition held in Washington originated with the bureau of mines and through the encouragement of Secretary Lane spread to all the other departments until 27 federal bureaus were represented, as well as the American Red Cross and the police department of the District of Columbia.

"I am of the opinion that such a moving exposition will be of great educational advantage to the country," said Secretary Lane to-day. "The exposition as I saw it was a revelation as to the extent of the federal government's activities along the lines of life saving and property saving. That it created great popular interest was evidenced by the fact that in the very busy city of Washington, having manifold other interests, the exposition attracted more than 300,000 persons during the week."

Best of all, this moving exposition will give the people of the interior towns and cities an opportunity to see and understand what the federal government is doing in places remote. For instance, the work of the public health service, treasury department, in guarding the gateways of the republic against epidemics of diseases sent us from foreign shores and the stamping out of these diseases on the threshold of the country; the work of the coast guard service, treasury department, in saving life at sea, making the ocean lanes safe for travel; the navigation bureau, commerce department, with its extensive system of wireless, which has already saved thousands of lives on shipwrecked vessels; the forest service's plan, department of agriculture, of fighting forest fires and preserving millions of dollars of natural resources to the nation; the methods used by the bureau of mines, interior department, in rescuing entombed miners from terrible death; and the safety methods of the interstate commerce commission which have so significantly reduced the deaths among trainmen.

"In addition there is the safety first work of the army and navy departments, in sanitation and the stamping out of the typhoid fever in the army and navy. These are but a few of the many interesting activities of the federal government that the people will be privileged to see and learn about. Altogether it will be a rare opportunity for the average citizen of the United States and will give him a better and a clearer idea of what a great and humanitarian country he lives in."

The Difference.

Residing in a little village is a lawyer who is famous for drawing wills, in which branch of practice he has long enjoyed a monopoly in the country for miles around.

A few months since a wealthy man died. There was much speculation as to the value of the property, and the town gossip set about finding out the facts. He hunted up the lawyer, and after a few preliminary remarks about the deceased, he said, rather bluntly:

"I suppose you made Brown's will?"

"Yes."

"Then you probably know how much he left. Would you mind telling me?"

"Not at all," the lawyer answered, as he resumed his writing. "He left everything he had."

The Difference.

While a sergeant of a certain regiment was engaged with a company of the National Reserves a short time ago, in physical drill—a drill that demands, to say the least of it, a small amount of agility—a private, who looked as if he had been younger in his day, complained to the non-commissioned officer in charge that he was too old for that sort of practice.

"How old are you?" inquired the instructor.

"Fifty-three," replied the private.

"Why," exclaimed the instructor, "the Romans used to do this sort of thing at the age of sixty."

"That may be," said the private, "but I'm not a Roman; I'm a Presbyterian."
